

In memory of Simon Maloy

We are heartbroken to inform you that our beloved friend and colleague Simon Maloy has passed away after a year-and-a-half-long battle with colon cancer. Simon has been a cherished member of the Media Matters family for more than 14 years, and he left a mark on the wider media landscape as well, with work published at outlets including The Week, Rolling Stone, American Prospect, and Salon. Simon's brilliance shone through in everything he did -- especially his writing. His honesty, profound sense of right and wrong, and incisive wit have left an indelible mark on all of us, and we are all better for having known him.

We ask that you keep Simon and his family in your thoughts and please consider donating to this GoFundMe to help support his family (<https://www.gofundme.com/ynfkts-in-memory-of-simon-maloy>) and to the Colorectal Cancer Alliance (<https://fundraise.ccalliance.org/blue-star-tributes/simonmaloy?tab=MyPage>), to help fight colon cancer and support people facing the disease.

"It's that bad": a timeline of NRA's recent inner turmoil (/research/2019/04/30/it-s-bad-timeline-nra-s-recent-inner-turmoil/223595)

Turmoil within the National Rifle Association was on full display during its 2019 annual meeting, when President Oliver North was forced out of his position amid reports of infighting and budget deficits and accusations of financial improprieties. The extremist pro-gun organization has been in chaos for months, and the infighting spilled into public view in March following the publication of a report on the exorbitant amount of money the NRA spends on a media operation, NRATV, that aired a particularly odious segment leaving several board members and NRA CEO Wayne LaPierre "livid and embarrassed." Now the NRA and ad firm Ackerman McQueen, which produces NRATV, are suing each other for tens of millions of dollars while trading salacious allegations of financial misdeeds, leaving the future of NRATV in doubt.
